Personal Inventory

What is your current GPA?

What is your gender? (male or female)
Some scholarships are offered for women and/or single parents.

What is your state of residence? If Georgia, what county?

Do you have a learning or physical disability?
Some scholarships are offered for those disabled in any way and others are offered for those with a specific disability.

List any family history of military service.
The military offers many awards not just for those who have worn a uniform, but also for their spouses and children, or even descendants of a veteran.

What is your nationality/ethnic background?
e.g Chinese, Greek.

Do you belong to a minority group?
e.g. African American, Alaska Native

What, if any, is your religious affiliation?

Are you an international student seeking to study abroad in the US?
There are scholarships designed for citizens of foreign countries (including Canada) who want to study in the US.

Have you decided on a major/career path?
The largest categories of scholarships are offered to students planning to study a particular college major or prepare for a particular career path. Even if you are "undecided" at this point, list all the majors/careers you are leaning towards.

Are you a “non-traditional” student?
“Non-traditional” refers to students who have been out of high school more than five years before entering college. Some scholarships are designed to encourage your pursuit.

Have you participated in any type of community service? If so, how many total hours?

Do you belong to a national or student organization?
Some groups offer scholarships to members and/or their families.

List the companies that you or someone in your family works for.
Employers and corporations often offer scholarship benefits to employees and/or their families.